WELCOME FOR THE HERBERTS.

New British Ambassador and His Charming American Wife Greeted by Society.

GLAD TO RETURN HERE.

Sir Michael, as He Steps from the Campania, Asks About the President and the Ship

Ambassador to Washington from Great Britain, arrived in New York this morning on the Campania, accompanied by his wife and his son. He was met at the pier by his father-in-law, R. T. Wilson, whose guest he will be during his stay in this city, which will last only until Monday. Sir Michael does not appear to be nearly so robust as he was in the days when he was Secretary of the British Embassy in Washington and boxed with President Roosevelt, who was then Civil Service Commissioner. He looks old and rather worn. His first inquiry was ene concerning the President.

Asked for Mr. Roosevelt.

*News of the injury to President Roosevelt worried me," said the Am-"I have the highest regard for him and am deeply gratified to hear that he is progressing so satisfactorily I knew him well during my stay in the United States from 1888 to 1893 and look forward with pleasure to a renewal of my acquaintance.

"In fact, I may say that coming back to America is one of the pleasantest experiences of my life. In my opinion one of the greatest honors that a British GROKER PROVES liplomat can have is to come as a reprecentative of my Government to this great country. I am gratified at the way the press of the United States received my appointment and sincerely pe that I shall prove worthy of the midence that has been expressed in

"Is the shipping combine consum-meted?" asked Sir Michael, interrupt-

He was told that so far as arrangements were concerned the combine was practically an accomplished fact.

"I am glad to hear it," he said. "I am not so frightened about the shipping ombine as are some of my countrymen There is no longer any fear of England losing her supremacy on the seas, and I rather favor a union of the shipping interests of my country and the United States. There is plenty of room for both of users.

England Watches Strike.

Sir Michael was asked if there was interest in the coal strike in England.

"Among the people in general," he replied, "there is very little interest manifated. But in commercial circles the keenest interest is felt. Every move of the operators and the strikers is watched, and I venture to say that the sonference between the President and he interested parties in the strike was is closely followed in the financial circles of London as it was in Wall Street. The General expressed his pleasure at the sight as he said to an Evening World reporter:

"I have come to America full of energy and a determination to create plans for the further enlargement of the Salvation Army. I shall strengthen the Army by establishing substations and agencies throughout this country. There is much that can be done in that respect, although our field is already of magnificent size. It is my desire to save every living soul.

The wedding was in strict conformity to the procedure laid down in the Episcopal ceremonies and passed off without incident.

When the ceremony was ended the Bishop and his bride paused in front of the chancel rail and received the congratulations of their relatives. Among them were the following relatives of Bishop Potter:

Alonzo Potter, son of the Bishop; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Russell, son-inlaw and daughter; Mrs. Mason Davidge, the Bishop's daughter; Winthrop Cowdin and James Brown Potter.

All of Mrs. Clark's sons were present and were among the first to bestow hearty congratulations upon the happy couple. Among the visitors to Cooperstown, bidden by invitations to the Bishop's wedding, are Capt. and Mrs. UK. McElroy, of Albany; Mrs. C. C. Rovee and Miss Crocker.

Suddenly, the dog, which had been playing with the child, caught the little one's, dress in its teeth and with one lerk, swung it clear of the track just as the car passed over the spot where it had been playing.

When the car was finally stopped the motorman, conductor and several passengers stepped off and showered all kinds of attention on the canine. Then, when the story was circulated, neighbors all around began sending delicacies for the dog until enough had been sent to feed him for a month.

This information reached Emanuel M. Friend, the former actress's lawyer, by cable to-day. The pair have been in the South American city for some time, having gone there by way of Paris and Madrid.

This wedding is the carrying out of the contract between Strong and the divorced wife of Lord Francis Hope, that he was to marry her as soon as she was togally free from the British nobleman. Owing to the specifications of the English court the absolute decree did not become operative until Sept. 23.
